

ADRIAN HUGHES QC

Adrian Hughes QC is a barrister and arbitrator practising construction and commercial law from 39 Essex Street chambers in London, with offices in Singapore and Kuala Lumpur.

His international arbitration work often involves energy and infrastructure projects in North Africa, the Middle East and all parts of Asia. Recent international construction arbitrations as counsel have involved a power plant in Saudi Arabia (ICC London), a desalination plant in Algeria (SIAC), a mining project in Indonesia (SIAC), a highways dispute in Hong Kong (HKIAC) and a Chinese shipbuilding case (LCIA). Domestically, he has been focusing on PFI, PPP and NEC related disputes, in particular in the road, rail, education, health and defense sectors.

He sits regularly as arbitrator in international cases and is currently appointed in construction and commercial arbitrations by ICC, LCIA, KLRCA and Shanghai IAC. He is an expert adviser to the UK Foreign Office on cooperation between the UK and China on dispute resolution. He also sits as Mediator and as Chairman or Member of Dispute Boards for international construction and infrastructure projects and is currently assisting with a new initiative to encourage the use of dispute boards on infrastructure projects in Singapore.

Adrian is a recent Chairman of the UK Society of Construction Law and regularly supports international SCL conferences.
